

Identifying and Addressing Data Gaps: An Approach with the Statewide Tobacco Survey

Please join us for our webinar

Thursday, October 20th, 12:30 pm – 1:30 pm, Eastern

Description: While researchers successfully establish robust surveillance systems, factors such as emerging issues, changing products, and new priorities can present challenges for capturing the data need to inform decisions and close information gaps. This webinar will discuss the types of challenges researchers encounter and possible approaches and methods for dealing with them.

Speaker: Meredith Hennon, is the epidemiologist in the Bureau of Tobacco Free Florida at the Florida Department of Health. She received her BA from Penn State University and her MPH from the University of Pittsburgh. She has four years' experience working in public health at the state level. Prior to coming to Florida, she worked in cancer research at the University of Pittsburgh.
